7. Understanding the links between migration and development

There is much debate as to whether migration promotes development in home countries. While cash remittances sent by diaspora populations do benefit home countries, policymakers must recognise the social and economic costs caused by emigration and seek to enhance the positive links where possible. So...

9. Migrating out of poverty: the case of Moldova, Tajikistan, Kosovo and Georgia

Migration can help reduce poverty in both origin and destination countries but governments need to make sure the right political and economic environment is in place. Migration should be seen as an opportunity to develop poorer regions rather than a threat, particularly in the case of the so-called ...
